Leading The World To Democracy

Class Statement
 Considering the future of the United States, we covered many areas of interest including: Leading the World to Democracy, Protecting US Global Interests, Building a more Cooperative World, and Protecting the Homeland. We believe that leading the World to Democracy is the better choice for the United States. In leading the world to Democracy the United States must consider the issues of Nuclear Proliferation, Terrorism, Trade, Immigration, and the Environment and how to integrate the concerns within the strategy. Nuclear proliferation is a huge threat to world stability. If everyone is Democratic, then proliferation agreements will be easier. Terrorism will be reduced since world governments and people would be free. We believe that if we collaborate with third world countries, we can improve their standard of living and thereby reduce the need for immigration to the United States while improving domestic employment opportunities. Democracy and capitalism promise product innovation and trade between countries, trade improves life economies and the standard of living for all citizens. Although we are concerned about the environment, this issue cannot be the driving force of our national policy. Leading the World to Democracy will build strong relationships between countries and ensure a safer more productive world!

The Greenhouse Effect: Changing the World's Climate

1. The Sun's Rays: The sun's rays hit the Earth's surface and are absorbed. This causes the Earth's surface to warm up.

2. The Earth's Surface: The Earth's surface radiates heat back to the atmosphere. This heat is trapped by the greenhouse gases in the atmosphere.

3. The Atmosphere: The greenhouse gases in the atmosphere trap the heat and radiate it back to the Earth's surface, warming it further.

4. The Result: The greenhouse effect causes the Earth's climate to warm up, leading to global warming and climate change.

ENVIRONMENT

Immigration

Immigration is a major issue for the United States. If the world is led to democracy, the threat of immigration will be reduced, because governments and people around the world would be free.

Trade

If the world is led to democracy, our trade will be expanded throughout the world. It will allow goods, services and money.
